NO.59 家族で食事をすることの重要性(1)

When it comes to eating, the United States has a lesson to learn from France. I'm not talking about the kind of elaborate dinners Americans often associate with the French. Many of the meals the French eat are quick and simple. The difference is that the French eat together. They have managed to preserve a tradition that is good for everyone's health - the family meal.

According to the French government's Committee for Health Education, 75 percent of the French eat dinner together as a family and many French schoolchildren still go home for lunch.

These figures haven't changed much in decades. In the United States, on the other hand, national studies show that on average, only one family in three sits down for dinner together on a daily basis.

Over the last two decades, there has been a steady decline in the number of American families that eat together regularly. It looks like the family meal is disappearing.

1	lesson	名詞	教訓・レッスン・授業
2	lecture	名詞・自動詞・他動詞	講義・講演・講義する・講演する
3	essay	名詞	(学生に課される)レポート・エッセイ
4	preserve	他動詞	を維持する・を保存する
5	conservation	名詞	(資源)保護
6	according	副詞	一致して・したがって
7	committee	名詞	委員会・(全)委員
8	average	名詞・形容詞	平均・平均的な
9	maximum	名詞・形容詞	最大限(の)
10	minimum	名詞・形容詞	最低限(の)
11	daily	形容詞・副詞	日常(の)・毎日(の)
12	annual	形容詞	年１回の・１年間の
13	last	形容詞・自動詞	最後の・この前の・続く・長持ちする
14	persist	自動詞	いつまでも続く・固執する[in]
15	steady	形容詞	一定の・安定した
16	stable	形容詞	安定した
17	decline	名詞・自動詞・他動詞	減少・衰退・低下・減少する・を断る

1	lesson
2	lecture
3	essay
4	preserve
5	conservation
6	according
7	committee
8	average
9	maximum
10	minimum
11	daily
12	annual
13	last
14	persist
15	steady
16	stable
17	decline	